DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. Based upon the submitted amendment, the examiner notes that claims 1,6,9 have been amended.
2. Based on the applicant's arguments, the examiner submits a new NF rejection based on new prior art.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
2. Claims 1-16 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per applicant's arguments that the disclosed prior art message type selection does not constitute the claimed message type, the examiner contends that it is not clear exactly what defines the term 'transmission protocol'. For the purpose of examination the examiner assumes it refers specifically to the known mms, sms, cms protocols.

Clarification/Correction is requested.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 1-2,4-6,9-11,14-16 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being unpatentable over L'Heureux (6697942) and further in view of Engstrom (7212808).

As per claims 1,6, L'Heureux discloses a messaging system (email) for a portable terminal that provides a common interface for different message types (abstract). The system comprises a common editor for all the different message types (Col 3 lines 1-30). The user selects the message type. The message must inherently be saved in order to be processed by the terminal in order to be sent to the network. Based on the selected message type the terminal will 'change the transmission format' (the 'text' portion of the data field will be filled with the specific message type data). The terminal inherently comprises input means and display means for the purpose of letting the user 'select' any known type of data to be transferred (selecting a message type, and detection of a user selection). The system inherently comprises control means to control the hardware to perform the disclosed functions. However, the system does not comprise an encoder that outputs the message signaling in a particular protocol based on the type of message selected.

Engstrom discloses a messaging service where the transmission protocol is automatically selected based on the chosen message type (Col 5 line 65). It would have been obvious to implement the automatic protocol selection function for the advantage that the protocol will be automatically selected.

As per claim 2, the received message content is displayed by the appropriate application on the terminals.

As per claims 4,5,9,10, all data must be saved (in a 'general format') at every processing stage in the terminal in order for the data to be processed. The saving is 'automatic' for those functions that do not require user input to proceed.

As per claim 11, the message is uploaded to a specific web address (col 3).

As per claim 14, the device is a portable terminal with a display in which the user navigates a series of menus. The gui interface will change and the options selectable by the user will change depending on the particular situation (such as being in the editor) that the user is in.

As per claims 15, 16, the device is a portable phone.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 3,7,8,12,13, rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over L'Heureux (6697942) as applied to claim 1.

As per claims 3,7,8, L'Heureux discloses a well known portable phone with a keypad and display interface as per the claim 1 rejection, but does not give the specifics of the interface, including a scrolling function.

The examiner contends it would be obvious to one skilled in the art that known gui interface types, such as scrolling or selectable display types could be implemented on the display as a matter of design choice. The examiner further notes that applicant's specification provides no specific detail as to how a scrolling function or selectable display types (via an information presentation unit) would be implemented on any particular terminal type. The examiner reads the scrolling function as a well known and obvious to implement feature on any device with a display.

As per claims 12,13, the examiner contends one skilled in the art would realize that the identification/authentication of the user (inherent to organized communication on a network) could be carried out with or without user interaction as a matter of design choice. The examiner further notes that applicant's specification does not give specific information as to how an authentication system (automatic or otherwise) would be implemented in any particular type of data device (as each data device would have a different set of programming parameters and input/output means).

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
